Mr. SPARKS offered a series of resolutions, which were referred to the committee on Federal Relations.

Mr. SPARKS offered the following resolutions, which were referred to the committee on Religion, viz:

I resolved, That the committee on Religion be directed to present a report to this House on all subjects related to them, and most especially on the religion of the people of this State, and the people generally.

By legal constitutional action at the proper time at the ballot box. This is the good old way to redress wrongs of Administrations in a free Government. It may be slow but it is sure. Mr. Lincoln and his unprincipled, wicked advisers are not the Government. Their term of office is of short duration, and the time will soon come, if we are true to ourselves and preserve the government, when their places will be filled by better men, when a conservative Executive and Congress, regarding the Constitution as still the supreme law of the land, will annul unconstitutional, impracticable legislation, illegal acts, and barbarous proclamations. In the meantime, however, the efforts of loyal men to crush the rebellion must not be relaxed, for upon the suppression of the rebellion depends the permanence of law and order and conservatism on this continent.

With the rebellion crushed out, and the authority of the government sustained, though at the cost of some of our best blood and treasure, we will have something to live for, something to hope, a glorious nationality preserved, the unity of government intact, the Constitution still the supreme law, though, as it taught for a time those outrages corrected, that gall and heroism now, a still young and vigorous nation with a power of resources and a martial fame before which the antiquated despots of the old world will stand abashed, and before us a bright future of promise of progress, of freedom, of high national advancement, of civilization, and glory. This is a feeble picture indeed of what we may hope for, if the rebellion is crushed, and the national authority vindicated; but let the rebellion succeed, and what have we to hope for? What have we to live for? Can there be peace? Can there be security? I cannot think so—Where then will be our venerated Constitution? Where our once glorious nationality? Where the great republic gone, and gone forever, and in place thereof a multitude of weak petty little States, all save regents, unable to protect their citizens, or give them respectability at home or abroad, or perhaps a number of military despotisms, grangling, quarreling and warring endlessly? I turn with relief from contemplating the wild confusion and anarchy of disunion to the glorious hopes of Union law, and liberty. Let us, therefore stand firm, unwavering, and steadfast by our principles and our flag. If we are true to ourselves the future will be true to us. Our cause is just, right, and most ultimately prevalent; and in that good time coming, when go to peace shall dispense her blessings under the benignity of national law and a glorious Union restored, the loyal and true every where will abundantly reward us by their gratitude and blessing for war's miseries, dangers and wounds, our trials, our sufferings, our sacrifices, and let us call to our selves now, in this dark and trying hour, that then we can claim proudly claim, that we were of the Grand Army of the Union, and that no violation of pledges by an unfaithful Executive, no unconstitutional, malignant legislation of a fanatical, elastic Congress could, in the darkest hour, swerve us from our high allegiance. I am grieved to hear of dissatisfaction in your regiment. You all owe it to yourselves and to your hitherto untarnished reputation resolutely to go to war and ally discontent. Let not insubordination, useless bickerings, or faltering now, tarnish the bright, hard-earned fame of the —. I know you have a good deal to bear, but it is your duty to bear it like a man. Let not the real or fancied misfortune of any officer swerve you from the path of loyalty to your country. Give my best wishes to all my friends. Write me again.
